. . . A Vigil . . .

A night,
A vigil
A mother keeps
For her babe,
Her son,
Who softly sleeps.

Alone,
And often,
Till break of day
Her heart
Is troubled
Alas! always.

Mid hope
And fears,
In his infant years,
She watches,
And longs,
Till his strength appears.

At last
A man!
War's dread alarms
Tear him,
Her all,
From her saintly arms,
The foe is at the gate!

Can you,
Or we,
Or even they,
Know what
She feels
For him away?

No man
E'er knows,
Or dreams on earth,
The love
Of her
Who gave him birth.

A night,
A vigil,
A blood-stained field,
A son,
A soldier,
Who'll never yield.

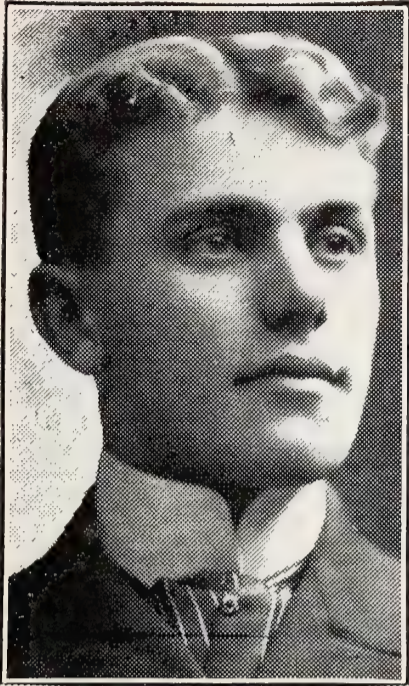

His thought
Of home
To his mother flies,
His heart
Is hers
'Neath starlit skies.

An Empire
Waiting
On many a son,
Should,
Like her,
Trust God alone.

A night,
A vigil,
And many more
Will come
And go
E'er the war is o'er.

Oh may
We all
Like her
Who breathes
Her soul
Into him
Who freely gives
His all,
Her all,
That the Empire lives,
Ponder,
Pray,
That within us lies
The heart
To fathom
Their sacrifice.
